What is Community Supported Agriculture (CSA) and how does it work?

Community Supported Agriculture (CSA) is a partnership between farmers and community members working together to create a thriving local food system. CSA farmers produce fresh vegetables, fruits, meats, fiber, or related products directly for local community members. Community members become shareholders by paying in advance for farm products. In this way, customers share the risks of production with the farmer, and the subscription payment early in the season provides capital up front when the farmer’s need is greatest.

CSA membership fees may range from $150 to $800, depending on the season length and the variety and quantity of food provided. The farm supplies members with shares of farm-raised food items on a regular basis throughout the growing season and sometimes into the winter, depending on the farm and its products. A produce CSA, for example, might distribute five to 20 pounds of vegetables once a week for 10 to 25 weeks, enough to feed two to four people. Some CSAs provide door-to-door delivery, some have central pick-up sites, and in others, members come to the farm to get their shares.

A few of the CSAs listed in this directory are collaborations among several farmers, who are combining their products to make up the shares.

Many CSA farms in this directory are certified organic. Nearly all the CSA farms in this directory intentionally implement practices that contribute toward organic production. We encourage consumers and CSA farmers to discuss growing practices, including the decision to seek or not seek organic certification. Indeed, the openness of such discussions about how food is grown is one of the benefits of choosing to be part of a CSA.

Linking their eating with the ebb and flow of the farm’s produce season offers CSA members a more connected role in their food system. Members of Iowa CSAs report enjoying many benefits, including:

• Fresh food grown for its taste and nutrition, often preserving the viability of heirloom varieties.
• Knowledge of their food’s source and how it is grown or raised.
• The opportunity to support local family farmers who practice sustainable agriculture.
• Access to planned educational and recreational opportunities on the farm.
• Information about nutrition, food preparation, and food preservation provided by the farm.
